

Is Media Taking Away Our Privacy?

B1 – B2

Module 6

Here's What We Will Be Learning
in this Presentation:

Summary

- Role Play Between Two Sisters Talking About Social Media Privacy.
- Exercises.

Role Play Between Two Sisters

Hey sis!
How are you?

Hi Amy,
I'm fine.
How was school?

It was fun.
Did you see the picture I uploaded on Facebook
today?

Why would you say that? I like uploading pictures and updating my status. All my friends do it.

Yes, I did. It's a nice picture of you and Jack. But Amy, I don't think it is necessary to upload everything you do
on Facebook.

Don't worry Jenny. I've put in the necessary privacy settings. Only my friends can see the posts I upload.

Amy, everyone is online nowadays. It is not safe to put up personal pictures.

But I trust my friends. I know them personally. They wouldn't do anything bad to me.

That's okay, Amy. But you never know who might misuse your personal data. Some people may use it to spread gossip and harmful misinformation.

Oh! So how do we recognize them?

There are many people who may have fake profiles. They may have the usernames of your friends but they might be someone else.

I get that. I will be more careful from now on.

We cannot recognize them easily. We just have to be careful about our own privacy.

Yes, I will. Let me send a message and inform my friends about this.

Think twice before you upload anything and be careful who you share it with.

Really?
Strange. But
why?

Yes, do that. And do you know that Facebook and other sites
can read the messages you send
to your friends?

They share your data with their partner
websites.

Is that a good thing? Does Facebook have the right to read
our private messages?

This data is used to send advertisements and other related stuff
to the users based on the topic that is discussed in the messages.

Is that right?
As users, can
we trust
these social networking
sites?

Thanks, sis, for sharing this with me. I will definitely inform my friends.

Facebook says yes. It is included in their privacy policy -- the one users have to agree while signing in.

That's debatable. But these sites claim
that user data is not leaked to third parties.

Exercise 1:

Answer the following questions:

- 1) Name the sisters talking in the role play.
- 2) Say true or false: Amy goes to school.
- 3) Say true or false: Jenny uploaded a picture of herself and Jack.
- 4) Fill in the blank: Some people may use it to spread _____ and harmful misinformation.
- 5) Fill in the blank: We just have to be careful about our own _____.

Exercise 2:

Punctuate the following sentences:

- 1) hi amy how was school
- 2) Yes i did
- 3) oh So how do we recognize them
- 4) but I don't find a reason why
- 5) is that right As users can we trust these social networking sites?

If it's on the Internet, it isn't private.

