Meaning and Usage

- The Future Perfect Tense is used to express an action which will occur in or is thought to be completed in the future.

For example, Maria will have studied tomorrow.

This sentence shows a sense of completion of an action (study) which will occur in the future (tomorrow).

- The Future Perfect Tense often expresses that by the time one action or event happens, another will have happened.

For example, They will have lived in 10 states once they move to New York.
