Be Going To

© 2018 albert-learning.com

ALBERT LEARNING

Meaning

- "Be going to" is usually used when something is already planned or definite.

Look at the difference between these sentences:

I'll make the supper tonight.

(Making a decision/volunteering to do something.)

I'm going to make the supper every Wednesday.

(This is already planned and organized.)

© 2018 albert-learning.com

ALBERT LEARNING

USAGE OF GOING TO

You can use "be going to + verb" when you want to talk about what you have decided to do or what you intend to do (in the future).

I am going to get up at 5:30 tomorrow morning.

means: I intend to get up at 5:30 tomorrow morning.

OTHER USES OF (BE) GOING TO.

Predictions with real evidence. ==> He's going to fail his exams (He's not studying).

© 2018 albert-learning.com

ALBERT LEARNING