Introduction

The world is becoming increasingly interested in North Korea and its way of life. However, we know extremely little about this country. Even those who have been there might give absolutely contradictory accounts.

Here some fascinating and virtually unknown facts about North Korea, which might help us to understand this country and its people a little better.

A United Korea

If you take a political map of the world made in any other country, you'll see both North and South Korea on it. However, North Koreans are certain that there is only one Korea: any school map shows a united country with the capital of Pyongyang. On the other hand, despite both sides seemingly dreaming about unification, both have their own reasons to maintain the status quo.
