Once upon a time, there was a snooty hare who was always bragging about how fast he could run and that no one could compete him.

One day, the hare dared the tortoise to have a race competition by which he would tease her knowing that she was slow in motion.

However, the tortoise was so brave and accepted the challenge.

The race started and the hare dashed like an arrow while the tortoise was lagging behind.

The distance between them was getting bigger and bigger raising the dare's self-conceit.
