The Present Perfect Continuous Tense

- ✓ Present Perfect Continuous Tense is used to express an action which has started in the past, still continuing and not completed so far.
- ✓ In this tense, start time of action will always be: for a few days, for ten months, for 2 years, since Wednesday, since 2011, since September, etc.
- ✓ 'Start time of action' is the main factor which differentiates between Present Continuous Tense and Present Perfect Continuous Tense.

For example:

She is cooking.– Present Continuous Tense.
She has been cooking since morning.– Present Perfect Continuous Tense.

In the above example, only start time of action 'since morning' is the factor which is changing the tense of the sentence.
